

Admissions Tests

Admissions Tests

Most subject areas at the University do not require applicants to participate in any of the national University entrance tests (BMAT, LNAT, UCAT etc). However, depending on individual circumstances, Admissions staff may ask applicants to produce a piece of written work, or sit an internal test, or undertake an internal assessment, in order to determine the standard that they have achieved. In addition, the following Schools/Departments require tests for some or all of their applicants:

Chemistry

Applicants who are offering the BTEC Extended Diploma/National Extended Diploma or an Access to HE Diploma will be required to complete an assessment. Successful completion of the assessment will be included as a condition of an offer. The assessment normally takes place in June each year and the department will contact applicants directly with details.

Dentistry

Students applying for the A200 BDS Dentistry programme will be expected to have taken the UCAT test.

Electrical Engineering and Electronics

Applicants who are offering the BTEC Extended Diploma/National Extended Diploma or an Access to HE Diploma will be required to successfully complete an online Mathematics test prior to an offer being made. Details of how to register for the online test will be provided by the department.

Medicine

The School of Medicine requires graduate entrants for the A100 and A101 programmes to undertake the GAMSAT test and requires non-graduate applicants applying for A100 to have taken the UCAT test.
